AMERICAN EAGLE PROVES TO BE A GAME FIGHTER

Peking, China, Sept. 14.—After trimming the feathers and otherwise disguising their mascot eagle, the United States marines attached to the American legation here recently succeeded in matching their bird to fight a previously undefeated cock which was the pride of the Chinese sporting element.

Upon being placed in the pit, the eagle went to sleep. The cock, full of pepper, bravely handed his adversary two blows. The hawk too much for the marine mascot, he awoke from his dream of the snow-capped Sierras and deliberately pulled the chicken's head off.

Our sea-soldiers anticipate no further challenge.

An Old English Handbill

advertised a public warning about coffee in its early days as a beverage in England. It said:

"You are not to drink it after supper unless you intend to be watchful, for it will hinder sleep for three or four hours."

That was 250 years ago. Today it is a well-known fact that sleeplessness, brought on by coffee drinking, is due to the presence of the drug, caffeine, in coffee. It is also known that coffee drinking is a common cause of various other ills.

POSTUM

was devised especially for people who should not use coffee, but who like a hot beverage with meals. It resembles mild Java coffee in its snappy taste, but contains no coffee, caffeine, nor any harmful element.

Postum is good for old and young, and can be drunk freely at any time of the day with pleasure and comfort.

"There's a Reason"

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Q.—Can you advise me what to do in order to get stout? My health is good, but I am very thin.

A. People who worry over their thinness can find much solace in the remarks of Goodwin Bryant, author of "Scientific Nutrition Simplified."

"The latest discoveries of science," says this commentator, "have proved conclusively that we know nothing whatever regarding the relation of a man's weight to the state of his health. The tables prepared by life insurance companies purporting to give the number of pounds that a man should weigh in proportion to his height and age are mere guesses based on their observation of the fact that healthy men of given heights and ages tend to tip the scales at the same point. This proves that these men have these weights, not that they should have them."

Scientific authorities do not presume to say that many people are too thin, they only say that they are not perfect. Experts tend to prove, however, that the old adage that "fat people are the healthiest" is a fallacy and that, as a matter of fact, it is the thin, wiry people who are likely to live longest and enjoy the best health.

"The experience of most of us," says Bryant, "has been that of the 'spindlin' period of our youth, when our extreme leanness often made us a hindrance for the humorous remarks of our friends."

Professor Chittenden says that obesity is a condition which is distinctly undesirable and may prove directly injurious. Under such conditions, the body is not only a mechanical obstacle to the proper activity of the body as a whole, but it interferes with the freedom of movement of the muscular organs as the heart and lungs, thereby imposing obstacles to the normal action of these structures. Further, whenever undue fat accumulation is going on in the body there is the ever present danger of the protrusion of the tissue cells, and so give rise to a condition known as "fatty degeneration."

Dr. Edward Curtis, he asked his experience with heavy-weight risks, where the waist measures more than 40 inches, and the long-drawn face of a business man, at a moment of lost dollars will make answer without words. Then let it be noted that the physique of the blessed ones that attain to green old age, and, in nine cases out of ten spry old boys—no disparagement, but all honor in the phrase—will be found to be modeled after the type of octogenarian Bryant or monogenarian Bancroft—the white-faced, wiry, and spare, as contrasted with the red faced, the puffy and the stout.

It is true, as has already been mentioned, that in old age much of an adventurous obesity is absorbed and disappears, but the Bryant-Bancroft type is that of a subject who never has been fat at all. And just such is pre-eminently the type that rides easily past the four-score mark, reins well in hand, and good for many another lap in the race of life."

The tendency toward obesity is undoubtedly an inherited trait. Thus, a sure and permanent way to become fat is to pick for one's self either corpulent parents or else corpulent ancestors. Another way that might help is to eat and munch on sugar and starch until the fat appears.

But why be disturbed over your thinness? It is neither a disgrace nor an affliction. Thin people have a decided advantage over their stout brothers. They are not loaded down with excess baggage and are more resistant to diseases of an infectious nature.

Those who realize the virtues of thinness are at an utter loss to understand why fat infants are always given the prize at baby contests. Fat babies are not necessarily healthier or prettier than thin babies. Their fatness is often the result of water-logged tissues. Whenever there is an epidemic the fat ones are the first to succumb. The fat baby has not only inflated tissues, but also an inflated eugenic value.

It is a common practice among farmers to fatten poultry for gain. By locking their hens in dark coops, so thin as not to permit movement and forcing milk and ground corn down the throats of the chickens, often with the aid of special devices known as stuffing machines, they are able to induce a degeneration of the tissues that makes for a puffed-up bird. But these farmers would never think of selecting such poultry as prize breeding stock. On the contrary, they won't breed. They can't.

It is not extreme to say that fatness of any kind is an undesirable condition which should be avoided whenever possible. My personal advice to those who would be stout is to remain thin. There never was a fat athlete and never will be.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Crowded conditions that exist in many of the various grades of our city schools and the increased attendance at the high school which has seriously overcrowded that institution must have certainly impressed itself upon every citizen interested in educational affairs. It is a serious problem that confronts both the school board and the superintendent as well as the city commissioners.

There has been serious talk for some years past of building an addition to the high school to meet the increased attendance and something in this respect seems necessary now. No matter what sort of an addition is built it would not meet the ever growing demand and would be similar to a wooden shack, hastily and insufficient for the needs designed.

Why not construct an entirely new high school along the most modern lines and transfer the present structure to the use of the grade schools? The modern idea of education is concentration of pupils in one school building and the combining of several of the grade schools under one roof would be a saving in fuel, teachers' hire, give the pupils more efficient training and be a step toward more modern methods.

There are several schools adjacent to the present high school that could be thus combined and a saving made, as stated before in salaries and running expenses. This would not mean that the size of the various grades were increased but the attendance in the different grades could be equalized more easily and each pupil receive the attention needed.

The idea of constructing a new high school building is not as complicated as it first appears. Other cities have faced the same condition that exists here and have met it in the same way by building new structures. With the closing of the small schools, sale of that property, if thought advisable, the needed expense would not entail such a great hardship that the plan would have to be abandoned for lack of funds.

Now is the time to consider such a project before any definite steps are taken toward constructing an addition to the present building that would soon prove inadequate and would make the whole structure a job lot building at best.

HIGHWAY DEFACEMENT.

Representatives of the National Highway Protective Association of New York are working in a number of states this year. Their effort is to arouse sentiment against the defacement of highways by advertising signs. In seven states there are now laws against this practice.

It amounts to little to clean out signs from the roads, just outside the street line there are ugly and glaring boards. This is a difficult matter to control, owing to legal obstacles. The laws apparently permit a man to make his land just as unsightly as he wants to. The fact that he injures neighboring real estate as well as his own, is not considered around for interference with the rights of private ownership. There are ways, however, by which such abuses could be gotten rid of. Every automobile association, improvement society, and country club should be an active agency for beautifying country life. Automobile associations should not confine themselves to efforts to improve road surfaces. All kinds of out door organizations should be interested in everything tending to make our rural scenes more attractive.

There are millions of people who object to advertising signs in highways or painted on barns, or scattered through pretty rural country. Such organizations as are mentioned above should pass resolutions against such defacement. They should urge in all ways that they may do so legally, that their members refrain from patrolling concerns that resort to this most objectionable method of advertising.

new question that was put up to them by the threat of a railroad strike. This issue the stump speakers are handling quite gingerly. They fear it is loaded with dynamite, that it is a double edged sword that cuts both ways.

The people of the United States were put in jeopardy of a very frightful calamity. It is estimated that a general railroad strike would cost the people $1,000,000,000. But the matter at issue was merely one involving the payment of perhaps $50,000,000 in wages.

It is fundamentally wrong that the people of the United States could be made to suffer a loss of $1,000,000,000, in order to obtain $50,000,000 for the railroad employees, or to save that amount to the railroads. It shows that our laws and social structure have broken down.

In many ways this issue is the gravest problem that will face the newly elected president and congress. The people are everywhere discussing it. They demand to know what each party proposes of safeguards to meet such a situation. The politicians will tend to squirm and twist to avoid committing themselves.

The people demand uninterrupted operation of railroads through all labor disputes. It is a necessity of our economic life. The candidates and the politicians are entitled to time to think out what is a new situation in our economic life. But in a few weeks the people will insist on knowing just what definite steps they propose to prevent the recurrence of any such threat.

POLITICAL OFFICES.

In a presidential campaign, interest and attention centers on the heads of the ticket. Meanwhile the politicians go on grinning and smiling, making nominations and appointments. They are glad to have the minor contests overshadowed by the great issues that occupy national attention.

The quality of the government in one's own locality comes more closely home to the citizen than any results that can happen at Washington. A vigorous, liberal, and business like policy in the national government is ardently to be hoped for. But it is no offset to inefficiency in school administration, poor roads, and shiftlessness or graft in home expenditure.

One should know something of the character of every aspirant for office. One should know also to whom he will owe obligation if elected. Only by a constant reading of the newspapers can one satisfy this vital need for an acquaintance with home politics.

It is unfortunate that outside newspapers see fit to warn their fellow citizens to keep their hands on their pocketbooks while in Janesville, owing to the numerous activities of pickpockets at the local railroad depot during rush hours. It is barely possible if the officers sent to watch for these gentry attended to their duty instead of visiting they would capture one or two and make an end of the nuisance.

Announcement that the Rock County Sugar company will open its factory next season should be an occasion of rejoicing for every resident of Rock county who is interested in the increase of wealth in the county. It means hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent right here at home for beet and labor in handling them and additional profits in all lines of business.

It is to be hoped that the coming winter will furnish enough ice for the local ice companies so that they will not find it necessary to talk of a combine and raise of prices and adulteration of deliveries when the frozen fluid given by God to man at small expense is most needed.

"After me the deluge," said a famous French king and then came the French revolution that tore the very foundations from under the European thrones of sovereignty. It is repeated in the United States in the present democratic administration and their ideals of government.

The next thing is the election of a republican governor and state legislature who will work in accord for the best interests of the taxpayers and citizens generally. Of course Wisconsin will go republican on the national issues.

Janesville's new "stagger" lights are much appreciated by the citizens generally and pointed out with pride to the visitors who see a vast difference from the old system of dimly lighted streets.

We crave your writing on a check,

No matter of what kind of hearing system a fellow puts in his house he will wish he had put in some other kind if he listens to the neighbors. Jed Frinks, our blacksmith, brought home a case of sleeping car soap with him and he expects to put a handle on it and use it for a hammer. Elmer Hackett is painting his hen-coop. If he had more enterprising citizens this town would be a thing of beauty and a joy forever. The Silver Cornet band has rented St. Higgins' barn, seven miles out, to do their practicing in. The lid is on in town so far as band rehearsing is concerned. Hank Tumms has read so much war news that when his wife asked him what the name of our new minister was he said it was either Muhlenhausen, Strassburg or Luxembourg, he didn't know which. Miss Amy Stubbs, our milliner, announces that she will have a new line of hats direct from Paris next week. Nobody has been ungentlemanly enough to call Amy a liar, but most people around here have their doubts. Constable Ezra Hand has placed

I never heard of one of them parlor joke entertainers dyin' of brain fever.

It pays to be polite.

A young man who gave up his sleeping berth on a southern railroad to an old lady received $40,000 under her will when she died a month later, all of which he had to pay.

When a dandy old gentleman steps upon your corn while climbing into his seat at the theater and then stands on it for a minute or two while he is adjusting his hat in the rear of the house, do not call him an antiquated bonehead or an ivory-headed old galoot, but smile upon him graciously and offer him the other foot to step on.

Make a few pleasant remarks about the weather and ask after the state of health of his family. Then go out and buy him a bouquet of violets and present it to him.

If an old lady with square spectacles, who looks as though she might have money, sticks an umbrella point in your eye, lift your hat politely and ask her if she won't have an ice cream soda.

If a gentleman in the train piles his baggage in your seat while you are in the smoker, give him a good clear and sit on the floor.

If a man runs you down with an automobile and breaks all of your ribs and one of the lamps on his car, send him a new lamp and a bouquet of American Beauties as soon as you are out of the hospital.

There are thousands of occasions of this kind of which you may take advantage and which may pay out well. You never can tell just who is going to die and leave money or just whom they are going to leave it to.

The Daily Novelette

THE LAST BUTTON.

"Oh what is love?" the lover cried.
"Who can describe its smart?"
"It's like," the tender maid replied,
"A toothache in the heart."

As he was writing "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party," on his typewriter, the small dark man becoming conscious of his left shoulder, looked over it.

He started.

He had seen a face in the mirror. The face of Lemuel Spongel!

It was himself, with his feet and clapped on a false mustache. Then just as he was striding towards the door, there was a knock on it. The discovery, apparently, had been simultaneous.

"I'll either outwit 'em or foil 'em!" muttered Lemuel Spongel, and, seizing an armful of sheets of typewriting paper, he hastily tied them together into a sheet ladder, and let himself out the window just as those in the hallway began to batter at the door, apparently unaware that it was not locked.

"Perhaps I'll only baffle 'em—that'd be sure death!" shuddered Spongel as he disappeared down the side of the house.

Manila, Sept. 14.—A portion of Manila, set aside as a model town for tubercular persons and their families, is a plan which the Philippine Islands Anti-Tuberculosis Society has just submitted to the Municipal board. The Society has already acquired a large tract of land in the Balic-Balic district of Manila and is to establish a big sanatorium there.

For years the Society has maintained a sanatorium at San Juan del Monte, a suburb of Manila. This was established through the efforts of Mrs. Eleanor Franklin Egan, an American writer, but the management of the Society has since passed into the hands of Filipinos who have kept the work going.

Plans are being laid for the opening of a school on the site and it is hoped to include in its enrollment children of delicate health. The school will be an open air institution, the first of its kind ever attempted in the Philippines.

MONROE MILK PRODUCERS ORGANIZE PLAN DEMAND PRICE BOOST TOMORROW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE].
Monroe, Wis., Sept. 14.—Sixty of the leading stock raisers and dairymen of this section have formed a Milk Producers' association, and affiliated with the Illinois state body, having a membership of 11,000. It is expected the first test of strength will come on Sept. 15, the new contract day of the Borden Milk Condensing company. It is understood the producers will demand $2 per hundred pounds, and it is regarded as quite doubtful whether the condensing company will be willing to meet this bidding to an agreement in the near future. A meeting of the newly organized association has been called for Thursday night, just in advance of the new contract date, and at that time an agreement will be reached as to what demands will be made.

About the Wedding Ring.

The wedding ring is of gold to signify the nobility and durability of affection. The form is round to imply that love should never end. The place is on the third finger of the left hand where the ancients thought there was a vein that came directly from the heart, and where it is always in view. The third finger being a finger least used, the ring may be least subject to wearing out.

Where They Were Likely to Be.

Jolly Man (whose appetite is the envy of all his fellow boarders)—"Well, I never! I've lost two buttons on my vest." Lady of the House (who has been wanting to give him a hint)—"You will most likely find them in the dining room, sir."

WANT CHANGES MADE IN STATION AT LIMA

Complaints of Citizens Are Aired at Hearing Before Commissioner Alexander on Wednesday.

The people of Lima Center, this county, or a portion of them, have indicated to the railroad commission of Wisconsin that they want a new passenger station. According to the petition filed, the present building is out of repair, unsanitary, inaccessible and inadequate to such an extent that a large number of harsh adjectives were used by the petitioners. A hearing was held at Lima Center yesterday, before Commissioner Alexander. N. P. Thurber, superintendent, and Thos. S. Nolan of this city, appeared for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company. Several witnesses were examined. The inaccessibility of the station building from the public highway was the chief complaint.

Mr. Thurber stated in reply that in addition to the repairs which the company expected to make to the building, it would be removed north of the railway tracks if the town of Lima would vacate a portion of the highway so that the building would be at a safe distance from the tracks. Commissioner Alexander recommended that the petitioners use their efforts with the town board to cause the vacating of a portion of the highway, or have it shifted north a few feet so that the building might be located as desired. The petitioners promised to take the matter up with the town board. Whether this is done or not it is evident that from the statements made by Mr. Thurber, there will be considerable improvement in the station building and the sidetrack facilities.

Among other things that came out at the hearing was that N. P. Thurber, now one of the superintendents of the railway company, had been an assistant to the agent at Lima Center for several months before he was twenty-one years of age. About the same time, C. H. Hart, now general manager of the system, was working at the station at Milton Junction.

The costume of the women of the Azores, shown in the picture, has interested fashion designers and it is probable that its influence will be seen in fall styles. Our wives this fall may impersonate thirteenth century monks.

WOMAN'S PAGE

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I love a boy dearly and he says that he loves me, but often I doubt it, because he is so unwilling to do anything for me. I get so much pleasure out of doing things for him that I cannot understand his attitude. Last week I had to stay and work until eleven o'clock. I knew ahead of time that I would have to stay and so I asked him if he would call for me. At first he said he would and then he seemed so unwilling that I told him I didn't want him to. We have been engaged and I broke my engagement as a result of this and other things. I am very unhappy now, but I feel that I would be happier if I married him. He is exceptionally selfish and cares for me only because I am rather good-looking and because I am twenty years old. Do you think I made a mistake in breaking my engagement?

You could not be happy with a man so selfish. I was unceremonious for him to act the way he did about talking you some late at night. I think you did the right thing in breaking your engagement.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: About three years ago I met a young man whom I admired very much. He was studying to be a lawyer. He was a very dear friend to a boy friend of mine and he came to see me several times. Then he told me that he thought it was a waste of time to come to see me and he also told me of my girl friends the same thing. I did learn of his remarks until a few months ago and all this time I have been very nice to him just as though he thought I amounted to something. When I learned the truth I thought I would be less

NECKS AND WAISTS.
A friend of mine who was trying to decide between two suits honored my judgment by calling on me. One suit had been marked down from thirty-five to twenty-five dollars and had some handsome embroidery on it. The other was a new, very nice, without hesitation, I advised her to buy the latter.

Because it had a more becoming waist line. It made her look well proportioned. She is a rather short woman. The more expensive suit was made with a belt somewhat below her waist line. The result was to make her look short and not well proportioned. To my mind the two most important features about a suit or dress are the position of the waist line and the opening at the neck.

Every woman ought to study her figure and know just what kind of belt line gives her the best proportions and refuse to be misled by the demands of style or by the allurements of costly material or handsome trimming to accept the wrong line.

Slim People Look Well in High Waist Lines.
Slim people usually look well with the high waist line, while plump people are better off with the long line from shoulder to hip and height and other characteristics help determine the matter, so generalities are dangerous. The rule for every woman is "Know thyself."

Just as an unbecoming waist line spoils the effect of the figure, so an unbecoming opening at the neck mars the effect of the face.

Never buy a suit or gown or blouse without studying this feature. What Shape Neck is Most Becoming To You?

My favorite white blouse is one for which I paid a dollar and fifteen cents. People often say how becoming it is without realizing that that is just because it has an unusually good V-shaped neck. One should know whether one can best wear the V, the round, or the square neck, then one should carefully inspect the shape of the individual garment, for slight differences in lines make big differences in effect.

These are little things, I know, and some will say I have not time to be so fussy about little things. But it is not so much a matter of time as of intelligence. You may even save time, for if you know what type of line best becomes you, you will know definitely what to look for instead of looking vaguely for "something becoming."

Somerset Salad—Chill stewed prunes and remove stones. Finely chop with prunes. Orange, prunes in groups of three in nests of lettuce leaves and sprinkle with finely chopped peanuts. Serve with French dressing.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.
Tomato Figs—Scald and skin small tomatoes, and to eight pounds of them add three pounds brown sugar; cook without water until clear appears; take out spread on dishes and dry in sun, sprinkling on a little syrup while drying. Pack in jars or boxes, in layers with powdered sugar between. They will keep any length of time and are equal to figs.

Pickled Nasturtium Seeds—Now is the time to pickle nasturtium seeds, and the following recipe has been tried and found to be excellent. Collect seeds while young and tender. Place them in a double boiler, cover with strong, cold brine. Let stand an hour, then place on the stove and bring to a boil. When they boil up take them out with a skimmer, put them into a suitable jar and cover them with boiling hot pickled liquid. Or, have at hand a jar of sweetened spice vinegar and into this drop nasturtium seeds picked as directed. Shake the jar well and before they become hard and woody. They make an excellent substitute for capers and an agreeable addition to salads or sandwiches.

Pickled Melons—Take hard muskmelons that are late in ripening; cut out a circular piece around the stem about three inches across; then scoop this opening remove seeds and scrape out any part that may be soft or ripened. Pack melons in a wooden tub or bucket. Fill them inside, and cover them with salt and let stand until the salt is melted. Remove them from salt, rinse with pure water and fill with mixture of chopped peppers and onions with a few seeds. Close the opening with the plug and fasten it with thread or toothpicks. Pack melons in a tub or bucket and cover with spiced pickling liquid boiling hot. Remove and scald the spiced liquid every day for four or five days, pour it back over the melons and finally seal up the jars. Or, pack melons with piccalilli or chowder or any sort of mixed pickles as desired.

Corn Relish—One dozen ears corn, one head cabbage, five red peppers, eight onions, bunch celery, three cups vinegar, two pounds brown sugar, one-fourth pound mustard, one teaspoon turmeric, one-half cup flour. Chop cabbage, put in salt for one hour; drain. Cut corn from cob, cover with vinegar and cook seven minutes; drain. Add cabbage, chopped onion, celery, chopped peppers and mix. Put into saucepan three cups water, two pounds brown sugar, one-fourth pound dry mustard, one teaspoon turmeric, one-half cup flour. Boil until smooth, stirring all the time; then pour this over corn mixture and seal in glass jars as desired.

WIFE OF ENGLISH DEFENDER OF KUT GETS PERMIT TO VISIT HUSBAND
London, Sept. 14.—The wife of General Townsend, who surrendered at Kut, has arrived in Constantinople on a visit to her husband, according to "The World." It proceeds that the journey directly after the surrender of Kut, and the Turks seem to have made no opposition. No one knows the minutes of the Kut controversy better than Mrs. Townsend, and she will be able to tell her husband not merely the criticism of the campaign, but of the personal tributes to himself.

Meantime, so I gather from a friend who left the city frequently, life is quiet in the capital, though there is much hostility to the Young Turks and constant conspiracies with wholesale executions, in which very little attention is paid to innocence or guilt, the people are fed and justice being extremely popular with the masses. Only certain articles of food are dear in the Turkish capital. Bread is cheaper than in England, while meat is not dear as in England, and coffee rules high in price, however, while the supply of luxuries is exhausted.

Training a Husband
"Isn't dinner ready?" Morris South took out his watch and noted that it was a quarter past twelve. "There is no dinner," said one of the morning's best you can't get through the best way you can and feel that you are a failure," said Marian, smiling bravely.

"You seem to forget that I have only a half hour and a half to cook and a half to wait for dinner," said Marian, smiling bravely. "I can't get the time," said Marian, sometimes saves the day for me," grumbled Morris.

"I am in no danger of forgetting it while you are around," laughed Marian, trying to restore her husband's good nature. "If dinner is five minutes late I am told of the short, nooning to the tenthousandth time."

Morris stalked into the living room and picked up a book. A loud wail descended the stairs and a scream came from the kitchen door. "Morris, please take the baby. He is not at all well today. He has not slept over half an hour at a time the whole morning."

"Let him cry a little; it will not hurt him," snapped the father. "You have him trained to think all he has to do is yell and he will be picked up by the time," said Marian.

"Morris, if you want dinner today you will have to take up the baby. He is not well and I cannot have him cry so. Morris sat still and said nothing. The wailing stopped for a moment, then began again in a subdued little moan.

"Marian, am I to have any dinner today?" called the irritated voice of the husband.

"The potatoes are done in the oven and the chops must be ready to take up by this time," answered Marian.

Anita Stewart Says
A SCREEN PLAYER'S WARDROBE.
"Dresses for breakfasts and dinners and balls."
Dresses to sit in and stand in, and walk in.
Dresses to dance in, and flirt in, and talk in.
Dresses in which to do nothing at all.
Dresses for winter, spring, summer and fall.
All of them different in color and shape.
Silk, muslin and lace, velvet, satin, brocade and broadcloth, and other material.
Quite as expensive and much more ethereal."

—"Nothing to Wear."
Yes, that ironical verse, "Nothing to Wear," tells just what a screen player's wardrobe must contain. It is a sort of garment when a certain wrap will be needed.

Just as people enjoy seeing faces that are typical of the characters that they are wearing, so they look for appropriate garments upon the players of the screen. Most of all do they demand fashionable, up-to-date and rich garments upon the characters in high life.

The so-called fabulous salary which the star of today receives has many demands made upon it for various things, but nothing more than clothes. A star in one week than clothes. Naturally some photographs call for more exquisite creations than do others, but, taking everything into consideration, it is very seldom that a player escapes a modeste's bill after she has finished preparing her wardrobe for a picture.

Every dressmaker company has a costume room which contains many dresses and wraps of all sorts and sizes, but these are used chiefly for clothing extra players.

And course above conspicuous may wear the same wrap in more than one picture without exposing herself to severe criticism on the part of her audiences. Yes, the garment may be made over, but in its original form it is good for one picture only.

The material of a garment shows more plainly upon the screen than you may suppose. For that reason the all-seeing eye of the camera must be taken into consideration and costly cloth purchased in the first place.

Another consideration of the wardrobe is the color of various articles of wearing apparel. As yet there is no standard color photograph differently upon the screen.

White and blue and yellow and light shades of all colors are white or of a light gray hue in the pictures and all the dark shades photograph nearly black. Hence no one may revel in certain shades for fear the garment would look absurd in the picture.

While variety is the main requirement for a player's wardrobe, there is no end to the wardrobe of a busy star successfully employed during five-reel dramas.

ACIDS INTOXICATION IN CHILDREN
Children are the most precious jewels in the world. Any time we can save them trouble it is our duty to do so. We have no quarrel with grandmothers, for a pretty handy woman to have around the house at times, but it is necessary to remind her occasionally of the following scientific, if annoying, fact: (1) Worms grow from the eggs of worms and the eggs reach the lips of the child on dirty fingers, or in polluted food, and (2) The worms of worms excepting the discovery of the worms themselves or their eggs (by microscope) in the evacuations.

The hunt for "worms symptoms" grandmothers are on the right track but in the wrong train. What she calls "worms, sure as shooting," is usually acute acid intoxication, or acidosis, as it is now called. The attacks recur at intervals in children from 2 to 10 years of age otherwise well.

After a day or two of listlessness, poor appetite, peevishness and tired feeling. The child often seems to have a slight sore throat and congested heavy eyes. The tongue is heavily coated with a white film. A slight cough is common. Fever develops, and the child becomes very restless, twisting in sleep, or crying. The tongue is heavily coated with a white film. The breath has a peculiar, heavy, sweetish odor caused by acetone, a product of the decomposition of certain food substances in the intestines). The child breathes very rapidly, from air-hunger, a familiar symptom in acidosis.

Vomiting occurs repeatedly, and no food can be taken or should be given, for twenty-four hours.

The bowels are constipated at first, and in many cases a diarrhoea sets in after a few hours, with foul green or gray evacuations.

The kidney secretion is scanty, very dark in color, and greatly prostrated. Often pneumonia, appendicitis and other things are suspected, the prostration is so severe.

The cause is not clearly understood as yet.

The remedy is soda or magnesia or other alkali. A tablespoonful of soda (salutatus) may be given in one dose to a child in half a glass or a glass of water. Often the child will eagerly take this when plain water would be rejected at once. If vomiting persists, medication by mouth, then two to four teaspoons of salutarina in a pint of warm water may be given by enema.

If a laxative is desired, milk of magnesia is by all odds the choice—teaspoon or more repeated hourly until the desired catharsis is evident. Attacks last from 24 hours to several days and occasionally seem to recur in epidemics. In some cases chronic trouble in the appendix seems to produce the attacks, and ultimately the child develops undoubted appendicitis.

JAP BABY CARRIERS DOING A BIG BUSINESS BETWEEN U. S. AND JAPAN
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Tokio, Sept. 14.—Attention is being called here to the growing success of what is known as the "Baby Carrier" business between the United States and Japan. The essence of the idea is the bringing to Japan of Japanese babies born in the United States in order that they may be brought up in this country and receive their education here.

Over three thousand babies, it is estimated, are born every year in Japanese families in California. Many families are anxious to have their children reared in Japan but are financially unable to bring the babies home. Consequently hundreds of babies are brought here by carriers.

On each trip the carrier brings from five to fifteen babies and distributes them in all parts of the empire, usually at the home of the grandparents. Masumi Yoshimi, one of those who conducted the carrier project, says he does not find the work troublesome.

A sufficient number of nurses to look after the babies in the train and then follows a carefully prepared itinerary. "The only danger," he said, "is mixing up the babies, but I have solved that by keeping an identification card constantly tied around the neck of each child."

Delicious Toast Without a Fire
Delicious toast for any meal may be had at a moment's notice without heat if you keep a package of Holland Rusk on hand. This wholesome Dutch delicacy is toasted in a beautiful light brown at the bakery and is ready to serve as it comes from the package, although its flavor and crispness are improved by heating for a few moments in the oven.

For breaded meats Holland Rusk gives a finer flavor than cracker crumbs or corn meal. Next time you have lamb chops prepare them this way:

Lamb Chops Breaded with Holland Rusk
The lamb must be wiped with a piece of cheese cloth wrung out in cold water. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and dip in egg batter as for fish steaks. Then roll in the sifted Holland Rusk crumbs and brown in butter. A chop prepared in this way will be a great deal more juicy as the heat cannot draw out the goodness of the meat while it is browning in the butter.

For creamed dishes, rabbits and wherever you would use toast, Holland Rusk is more delicious, and easier and quicker to serve. Phone your grocer for a package and write Holland Rusk Co., Holland, Mich., for book of new and easily prepared recipes.

Windmill Cookies are another Dutch dainty that your grocer can supply. You will pronounce them the most delicious cookies you ever tasted.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 14.—Two million, four hundred thousand conversations on love, business, gossip and whatnot is the record today of Miss Nell Taylor in the 24 years' continuous service as a "hello" girl here.

The first eight years she spent at the switchboard handling calls at the rate of 1,600 a day. She spent another eight years as supervisor, answering foolish questions.

"Will you marry me?" she says is the silliest and most frequent question asked. She still is single and glad of it.

When she started to work years ago Miss Taylor was 15. There were only 1550 telephones in Columbus then, as compared to 45,000 today.

"Bland's not here tonight. He left today on one of his trips, taking 'Alloy' and some others. But his other man, Rugg, he's here. Rugg's the little how-behind man with half of his face set off. He's uneasy. But he can show you one of the one he's got. An' there's Hardin. You know him? He's got an outlaw gang as big as Bland's."

Euchre went on calling Duane's attention to other men of the band. Any one of them would have been a marked man in a respectable crowd. Here each took his place with more or less distinction, according to the record of his past wild prowess and his present possibilities. Duane, realizing that he was tolerated there, received in careless spirit by this terrible class of outcasts, experienced a feeling of revulsion that amounted almost to horror. Was his being there not an ugly dream? What had he in common with such outlaws? Then in a dash of memory came the painful proof—he was a criminal in sight of Texas law; he, too, was an outlaw.

CHAPTER VI.

Next morning Duane found that a muddy and despondent spell had fastened on him. Wishing to be alone, he went out and walked a trail leading round the river bank. He thought and thought. After a while he came out that the trouble with him probably was that he could not resist himself to his fate. He cared vastly more, he discovered, for what he considered honor and integrity than he did for life. He saw that it was bad for him to be alone. But, it appeared, lonely months and perhaps years inevitably must be his.

Another thing puzzled him. In the bright light of day he could not recall the state of mind that was his at twilight or dusk or in the dark night. By day these visitations became to him what they really were—phantoms of his own fears. He could dismiss the thought of them then. He could scarcely remember or believe that this strange fear of fancy or imagination had troubled him, made him sleepless and sick.

At length he determined to create interest in all that he came across and so forced himself as much as possible. He had an opportunity now to see just what the outlaw's life really was. He meant to force himself to be curious, sympathetic, observant. And he would stay there in the valley until its possibilities had been exhausted or until circumstances sent him on upon his uncertain way.

When he returned to the shack Euchre was cooking dinner.

"Say, Buck, I've news for you," he said; and his tone conveyed either pride in his possession of such news or pride in Duane. "Feller named Bradley rode in this mornin'. He's heard some about you. Told about the ace of spades they put over the bullet-holes in that copperhead Bain you plugged. Then there was a rancher shot at a water-hole twenty miles south of Wellston. Reckon you didn't do it?"

"No, I certainly did not," replied Duane.

"Wal, you got the blame. It ain't nothing for a feller to be saddled with gun-play he never made. An' Buck, if you ever go famous, as seems likely, you'll be blamed for many a crime. The border 'll make an outlaw of you. Wal, that's enough of that. I've more news. You're goin' to be popular."

"Popular? What do you mean?"

"I met Bland's wife this mornin'. She seen you the other day when you rode in. She shore wants to meet you, an' so do some of the other women in camp. They always want to meet the new feller who's just come in. It's lonesome for women here, an' they like to hear news from the towns."

"Well, Euchre, I don't want to be impolite, but I'd rather not meet any women," rejoined Duane.

"I was afraid you wouldn't. Don't blame you much. Women are hell. I was hopin', though, you might talk a little to that poor Janesville girl."

"What kid?" inquired Duane, in surprise. "Didn't I tell you about Jennie—the girl Bland's holdin' here?"

"No. Tell me now," replied Duane, abruptly.

"Wal, I got it this way. Mebbe it's straight, an' mebbe it ain't. Some years ago Benson made a trip over the river to buy meself an' other drinks. An' he run across a gang of greasers with some gringo prisoners. I don't know, but I reckon there was some barterin', perhaps murderin'. Anyway, Benson fetched the girl back. She was starved an' scared half to death. She hadn't been harmed. I reckon she was then about fourteen years old. Bland seen the kid right off and took her—bought her from Benson. You can gamble Bland didn't do that from notions of chivalry. Kate Bland's been hard on Jennie, but she's kept Bland an' the other men from treating the kid shameful. Late Jennie has grown into an all-fired pretty girl, an' Kate is powerful jealous over her. I can see hell brewin' over there in Bland's cabin. That's why I wish you'd come over with me. You'd get to see Jennie, an' mebbe you could help her. I had a baby girl once, an' if she'd lived she'd be as big as Jennie now, an' I wouldn't want her here in Bland's camp."

"I'll go, Euchre. Take me over," replied Duane. He felt Euchre's eyes upon him. The old outlaw, however, had no more to say.

In the afternoon Euchre set off with Duane, and soon they reached Bland's cabin. Duane remembered it as the one where he had seen the pretty woman watching him ride by. Through the open door Duane caught a glimpse of bright Mexican blankets and rugs. Euchre knocked upon the side of the door.

"Is that you, Euchre?" asked a girl's voice, low, hesitatingly. The tone of it, rather deep and with a note of fear, struck Duane.

"Yes, it's me, Jennie. Where's Mrs. Bland?" answered Euchre.

"She went over to Deger's. There's somebody sick," replied the girl.

Euchre turned and whispered something about luck. The soap of the outlaw's eyes was added significance to Duane.

"Jennie, come out or let us come in. Here's the young man I was tellin' you about," Euchre said. "Come out, Jennie, an' mebbe he'll—"

Euchre did not complete his sentence. But what he said was sufficient to bring the girl quickly. She appeared in the doorway with downcast eyes and a stain of red in her white cheek. She had a pretty, sad face and bright hair.

"Don't be bashful, Jennie," said Euchre. "You an' Duane have a chance to talk a little. Now I'll go fetch Mrs. Bland, but I won't be hurryin'."

With that Euchre went away through the cottonwoods.

"I'm glad to meet you, Miss—Miss Jennie," said Duane. "Euchre didn't mention your last name. He asked me to come over to—"

Duane's attempt at pleasantness halted short when Jennie lifted her lashes to look at him. Some kind of a shock went through Duane. Her gray eyes were beautiful, but it had not been beauty that cut short his speech. He seemed to see a tragic struggle between hope and doubt that shone in her piercing gaze. She kept looking, and Duane could not break the silence. It was no ordinary moment.

"What did you come here for?" she asked, at last.

"Well—Euchre thought—he wanted me to talk to you, cheer you up a bit," replied Duane, somewhat lamely. The earnest eyes embarrassed him.

"Euchre's good. He's the only person in this awful place who's been good to me. But he's afraid of Bland. He said you were different. Who are you?"

Duane told her.

"You're not a robber or rustler or murderer or some bad man come here to hide?"

"No, I'm not," replied Duane, trying to smile. "I'm on the dodge. You know what that means. I got in a shooting-ramp at home and had to run off. When it blows over I hope to go back."

"Oh, I know what these outlaws are. Yes, you're different." She kept the strained gaze upon him, but hope was kindling, and the hard lines of her youthful face were softening.

Something sweet and warm stirred deep in Duane as he realized the unfortunate girl was experiencing a birth of trust in him. Then the glow began to fade; doubt once more assailed her.

"It can't be. You're only—after me, too, like Bland—like all of them."

Duane's long arms went out and his hands clasped her shoulders. He shook her.

"Look at me—straight in the eye."

"Look at Me—Straight in the Eye."

There are decent men. Haven't you a father—a brother?"

"They're dead—killed by raiders. We lived in Dimmitt County. I was carried away," Jennie replied, hurriedly. She put up an appealing hand to him.

"Forgive me. I believe—I know you're good. It was only—I live so much in fear—I'm half crazy—I've almost forgotten what good men are like. Mister Duane, you'll help me?"

"Yes, Jennie, I will. Tell me how. What must I do? Have you any plan?"

"Oh no. But take me away."

"I'll try," said Duane, simply. "That won't be easy, though. Are you watched—kept prisoner?"

"No. I could run off lots of times. But I was afraid. I'd only have fallen into worse hands. Euchre has told me that. Mrs. Bland beats me, half starves me, but she has kept me from her husband and those other dogs. She's been as good as that, and I'm grateful. She hasn't done it for love of me, though. She always hated me. And lately she's growing jealous. I hear her fighting with Bland about me. Then I've heard Chess Alloway try to persuade Bland to give me to him. Duane, you must be quick if you'd save me."

"I realize that," replied he, thoughtfully. "I think my difficulty will be to fool Mrs. Bland. If she suspected me she'd have the whole gang of outlaws on me at once."

"She would that. You've got to be careful—and quick."

"What kind of a woman is she?" inquired Duane.

"She's—she's brazen. I've heard her with her lovers. They get drunk sometimes when Bland's away. She's got a terrible temper. She's vain. She likes flattery. Oh, you could fool her easy enough if you'd lower yourself to—"

"To make love to her?" interrupted Duane.

Jennie bravely turned shamed eyes to meet his.

"My girl, I'd do worse than that to get you away from here," he said, bluntly.

"But—Duane," she faltered, and again she put out the appealing hand. "Bland will kill you."

Duane made no reply to this. He was trying to still a rising strange tumult in his breast. The old emotion—the rush of the instinct to kill! He claimed, they don't put people in prison for borrowing money from somebody. It's a good thing that I had to knock a man down three or four times before he would lend it to me."

The professor was delivering the last lecture of the term. He told the students with much emphasis that he expected them to devote all their time to preparing for the final examination. The examination papers are now in the hands of the printer. The pupils concluded, "Now is there any question you would like answered?" Silence prevailed for a moment, then a voice piped up: "Who is the printer?"

"But are you sure that I shall recover?" the patient asked anxiously. "I heard that sometimes you have given a wrong diagnosis and treated a patient for pneumonia who afterward died of typhoid fever."

"You have been scandalously misinformed," said the doctor indignantly. "If I treat a man for pneumonia he dies of pneumonia."

The grammar school principal went from room to room explaining what to do in case of fire. The pupils listened with respectful attention until he came to his final instructions, then smiles and giggles disturbed the principal's serenity.

"Above all things," he said, "if your clothing catches fire, remain cool."

"I'll prove to you that I did it yesterday! Remember it rained so hard and you rushed up to see if the windows were open!"

"Why grandma! It hasn't rained for a week! Don't you know I was going to the club that day and said: GEE, I THINK I HEARD THE DOOR-BELL! I GO DOWN AND SEE!"

"Come to think of it, you may be right! It was yesterday I made the beds wasn't it?"

turned cold all over.

"Chess Alloway will kill you if Bland doesn't," went on Jennie, with her tragic eyes on Duane's.

"Maybe he will," replied Duane. It was difficult for him to force a smile. But he achieved one.

"Oh, better take me off at once," she said. "Save me without risking so much—without making love to Mrs. Bland!"

"Surely, if I can. There! I see Euchre coming with a woman."

"That's her. Oh, she mustn't see me with you."

"Wait—a moment," whispered Duane, as Jennie slipped indoors. "We've settled it. Don't forget. I'll find some way to get word to you, perhaps through Euchre. Meanwhile keep up your courage. Remember I'll save you somehow. We'll try strategy first. Whatever you see or hear me do, don't think less of me."

Jennie checked him with a gesture and a wonderful gray flash of eyes.

"I'll bless you with every drop of blood in my heart," she whispered, passionately.

It was only as she turned away into the room that Duane saw she was lame and that she wore Mexican sandals over bare feet.

He sat down upon a bench on the porch and directed his attention to the approaching couple. The trees of the grove were thick enough for him to make reasonably sure that Mrs. Bland had not seen him talking to Jennie. When the outlaw's wife drew near, the situation took on a singular zest.

Euchre came up on the porch and awkwardly introduced Duane to Mrs. Bland. She was young, probably not over twenty-five, and not quite so prepossessing at close range. Her eyes were large, rather prominent, and brown in color. Her mouth, too, was large, with the lips full, and she had white teeth.

Duane took her proffered hand and remarked frankly that he was glad to meet her.

Mrs. Bland appeared pleased; and her laugh, which followed, was loud and rather musical.

"Mr. Duane—Buck Duane, Euchre said, didn't he?" she asked.

"Buckley," corrected Duane. "The nickname's not my choosing."

"I'm certainly glad to meet you, Buckley Duane," she said, as she took the seat Duane offered her. "Sorry to have been out. Kid Fuller's lying over at Deger's. You know he was shot last night. He's got fever to-day. When Bland's away I have to nurse all these shut-up boys, and it sure takes my time. Have you been waiting here alone? Didn't see that slattern girl at mine?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"No. I could run off lots of times. But I was afraid. I'd only have fallen into worse hands. Euchre has told me that. Mrs. Bland beats me, half starves me, but she has kept me from her husband and those other dogs. She's been as good as that, and I'm grateful. She hasn't done it for love of me, though. "But—Duane," she faltered, and again she put out the appealing hand. "Bland will kill you."

Duane made no reply to this. He was trying to still a rising strange tumult in his breast. The old emotion—the rush of the instinct to kill! He claimed, they don't put people in prison for borrowing money from somebody. It's a good thing that I had to knock a man down three or four times before he would lend it to me."

The professor was delivering the last lecture of the term. He told the students with much emphasis that he expected them to devote all their time to preparing for the final examination. The examination papers are now in the hands of the printer. The pupils concluded, "Now is there any question you would like answered?" Silence prevailed for a moment, then a voice piped up: "Who is the printer?"

"But are you sure that I shall recover?" the patient asked anxiously. "I heard that sometimes you have given a wrong diagnosis and treated a patient for pneumonia who afterward died of typhoid fever."

"You have been scandalously misinformed," said the doctor indignantly. "If I treat a man for pneumonia he dies of pneumonia."

The grammar school principal went from room to room explaining what to do in case of fire. The pupils listened with respectful attention until he came to his final instructions, then smiles and giggles disturbed the principal's serenity.

"Above all things," he said, "if your clothing catches fire, remain cool."

"I'll prove to you that I did it yesterday! Remember it rained so hard and you rushed up to see if the windows were open!"

"Why grandma! It hasn't rained for a week! Don't you know I was going to the club that day and said: GEE, I THINK I HEARD THE DOOR-BELL! I GO DOWN AND SEE!"

"Come to think of it, you may be right! It was yesterday I made the beds wasn't it?"

"Heavens! I smell something burning!"

"They're always trying to get the best of me! This is the last time, though! The last time!"

BOWLERS ORGANIZE TEN TEAM LEAGUE; OPEN PLAY MONDAY

Janesville Association "Nut" League Starts Twenty-Seven Game Schedule Next Week.

H. C. Baumann, Dr. S. F. Richards and J. E. Newman selected as a committee to arrange for the Janesville Bowling Association league to start next week. The league will consist of ten teams, each consisting of five bowlers. The teams will be named after the Janesville Bowling Association, although it is not yet organized. The league will be held at the Janesville Bowling Association, which is located at the corner of the street, a candidate for a padded cell. Aside from arranging the team rosters, the committee drafted a schedule of ten games for the week beginning September 18, and the schedule for the week beginning September 18 is listed below. It is requested that in case any person selected as a team bowler will be unable to participate, he will notify Secretary Baumann before Saturday so that any substitutions are necessary may be made in time to prevent a disruption of the schedule.

Captains of teams are to be selected on the occasion of the team's first meeting on the alleys. The captains will constitute the board of directors of the association. All games will be bowled under the rules of the American Bowling Association. Payment of one dollar gives one a membership in the Janesville Bowling Association. The regulations decided upon by the committee include a number of important rules, among which are a nickel fine for every foul and a ten cent fine for every score under 125. The money will go into the general fund of the association as well as 75 per cent of the entry money for prizes.

Prizes were decided upon last evening and are as follows:
First team, Gold Medal, donated by Miller Bros. and Picture.
Second team, Ten Dollars Cash.
Third team, Five Dollars Cash.
Season's high score, Three Dollars Cash.
Season's low average, Five Dollars Cash.

Nut League Team Rosters:

Next Week's Schedule:

Pecans vs. Walnuts, Wednesday, 20th.
Hickory vs. Beechnuts, Thursday, 21st.

George Burns of the Giants has the unique record of never having been suspended from a game either in the New York State League or in the National League. He learned to hold his tongue long ago, and although he objects now and then to a decision, he never carries the protest to a point where the umpire begins to get excited.

Manager Huggins of the St. Louis Cardinals announces the release of shortstop Roy Corhan to San Francisco, from which club he was purchased last winter. Corhan has been out of the game much of the season, due to a sore arm and then an injured finger. He has played good ball in spots, but not consistently. However, he was a bear on the coast and San Francisco has been anxious to get him back.

MONTEREY STARS DEFEAT JONES' BOWLERS AT MILLER'S

With a twenty-one pin margin the Monterey All Stars defeated the Jones' Dyeworks bowlers at the Miller alleys last night. The dyers took the second game by a consistent game, but fell down badly in the first and third frames. Here's the sheet they posted on Roselings corner this morning:

MORRIS MILLER

The best that the Giants can do is to look forward to next season. In young Holke they apparently have a find, in Fletcher a first class shortstop, in Zimmerman a slugging third baseman and in Herzog the most valuable all around infielder in the league. The outfield certainly compares favorably with any in the game and McCarthy and Harden form a strong catching combination. It looks, therefore, as if McGraw had very little more to do before leading his team to the heights again.

Fielder Jones once defined a good umpire as "a man who runs the game." This is absolutely true. The good umpire is a man who, right or wrong, makes his decision with authority and never permits himself to waver between two opinions. He must know his own mind, and while he should be arbitrary, he must absolutely and quietly uphold the authority with which the league has invested him.

Willie Mitchell, the veteran south-north pitcher, for many years with the Cleveland Indians, but now a member of the Detroit Tigers, is laboring under the impression that Silk O'Loughlin, the umpire, is conceited. Here's the reason: Willie was pitching and Silk called several balls that the left-hander thought were strikes. "Guess you're getting too old to see," growled Mitchell. "Well, this is my nineteenth year umpiring, and I haven't missed a strike yet," shot back Silk.

The Chicago Cubs were pretty good to Larry Doyle if the account of his contract is correct. It is said to be for two years and call for $7,500 a year. The Cubs were not required to give Doyle any such velvet, for the deal with the Giants provided that contracts should be assumed and no more and Doyle's contract with New York had another year to run.

"Skeeter" Fanning since 1911 one of the Coast League's leading pitchers, has been released by the release by Manager Wolverton of the San Francisco team. Other plans of Wolverton to bolster up the club was the asking of wavers of Jack Dalton, former big league outfielder.

Eight more players have been picked up by Connie Mack from the byways of the minor league field. The new players are Outfielder Bodie of San Francisco, Pitcher Johnson and Infielder Bates of Vernon, Cal.; Pitcher Volz and Outfielder Brown of Harrisburg, Pa.; Pitcher Farnham of Raleigh, N. C.; Infielder Grover of Butte, Mont.; and Outfielder Trasher of Atlanta, Ga.

Pitcher Clarence "Pop-Boy" Smith and Catcher DeBerry of the New Orleans Pelicans have been purchased by the Cleveland Indians. Smith was with the White Sox in 1913 and his work this season has kept the Pelicans in the Southern league race. He's Jim DeBerry's brother-in-law. DeBerry was with the Indians for a short time several years ago.

Sam Rice may don a uniform any day now, and is sure to go on the deal trip with the Washington Nationals. Sam probably needs a week

FOOTBALL CALL SOUNDS FOR MANY COLLEGE ELEVENS

Captain Dagnun of Harvard and Crimson squad on way to first fall practice at Soldiers Field, Cambridge.

Colleges throughout the country have issued orders for the first football practice and at many places it is already under way. Among the larger colleges Harvard's situation is most desperate. Percy Haughton will not be able to give very much time to the football squad because of his interest in the Braves. In addition, the material is not of high caliber. Mahan has graduated, together with Soucy, the crack end; Cowan, the guard; Wallace, center, and Gilman and Parsons, both tackles.

of practice to get him in playing fettle, but he ought to be better than ever, as the malaria germs have been eliminated from his blood. Rice is pretty certain to hit even better than he did before, for he was not well during the last month or two. He stuck to the job, but was barely able to do himself justice. When he gets back in the game he probably will add a lot of strength to the team.

SOX TAKE FORTH GAME FROM BROWNS

Win Weird Contest, 9 to 8, Yesterday In Which Nine Pitchers Divide Honors or Dishonors.

Ten innings of ozy baseball at the White Sox park ended yesterday with the Rowlands at the big terminus of a 9 to 8 score, the St. Louis Browns, dropping the fourth and final game of the series. Thirty-two players were used in the fight which resulted in a bad injury to Ray Schalk's right hand, a finger split, and a slightly sprained ankle of Tex Russell's. Rowland used five pitchers and Fielder Jones four. Williams opened to be succeeded by Cicotte, Faber, Russell and Danforth in turn. Hamilton started for the Browns and was followed by Davenport, Koob and Weisman. Weisman's belated throw which went into the trenches was accountable for the White Sox run which won.

Tigers Close Up.
But three points separated Detroit from Boston today as a result of the Tiger's 4 to 1 victory over New York yesterday. The game was a battle royal, a game of pitchers and exceptional fielding.

"JIM" SCOTT AND WARE TO PITCH FOR CARDINALS

Janesville baseball fans are about to have the privilege of sweet revenge on the Beloit Fairies. The prediction is that the Cardinals will treat them to the same medicine that was prescribed for Janesville two weeks ago.

That medicine is pronounced "Jim" Scott. A message from Chicago this morning conveyed the encouraging news that Scott and Ware would do the pitching for the locals Saturday and Sunday. The balance of the lineup will be announced later.

Not a Great Pleasure.

Professor Huxley wrote to Lord Farrer in 1881: "Of a few innocent pleasures left to man past middle life, the jamming common sense down the throats of fools is perhaps the keenest." A great pleasure, indeed, to one who enjoys dodging brickbats.

Oil From Waste.

A factory has been built at Lubeck, Me., for the purpose of extracting oil from herring waste and making dried fish scrap from the residue.

Earache.

Dip a piece of cotton wool in sweet oil, then into black pepper; putting this in the ear proves a quick remedy. Nose Bleed.—Roll a piece of soft paper quite hard and pack hard between the upper lip and the gum, and in a few minutes the bleeding will stop.

Hoarseness.—Beat the white of an egg, add the juice of a lemon and sweeten with sugar. A teaspoonful at a time.

The "Nelson Touch."

Who invented the phrase the "Nelson touch," which is being freely used again in connection with the North sea battle? Admiral Mahan states that it probably originated in Nelson's family circle at Merton, and the first frequent use of it occurred in the great seaman's correspondence with Lady Hamilton, as where, writing just before reaching the fleet, he remarked: "I am anxious to join, for it would add to my grief if any other man was to give them the Nelson touch, which we say is warranted never to fail." There was a quaint allusion to it also in the motto which he told Rose had adopted—"Touch and Take." London Chronicle.

BRITISH BLACKLISTS NEED NOT WORRY U. S. SAYS INVESTIGATOR

Secret of Overcoming Rule Lies in Investment of Capital Abroad and Establishing Banks
There.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Rome, Sept. 14.—British blacklists and other economic and industrial measures need not worry the American business man, said Clarence W. Moonaw, European investigator of markets to the U. S. department of agriculture, here today. Moonaw's investigations in England, France, Switzerland and Italy are the basis for his statement. Later he will visit Russia, Scandinavian countries and Spain. Moonaw is one of many agents in Europe making plans to protect America's future commercial relations with Europe. Special investigation is being made into the exportation of American grain, live stock and cotton. The department probably will establish permanent agencies in the principal European cities after the war to see that American interests are protected and furthered. Plans are being made to overcome England's discriminatory freight rates in favor of herself and the allies and to the disadvantage of enemy and neutral nations. It is said that now, because the grain must be shipped in British bottoms, which bought one prior to the United States is sold to Britain and her allies by British carriers at five times less than it is sold to Switzerland and other neutral countries.

An attempt is being made to establish direct trade relations between the United States and Italy. As it now is, Italy must buy, for instance, her cotton through Liverpool all her cotton through Liverpool agents, thus permitting the British to control the Italian-American trade. The secret of how America is to overcome these difficulties, at least in part, is the investment of American capital in European countries and the establishment of American banking facilities. The National City bank of New York already has taken steps in this direction in Milan and Genoa. The Americans are the only people the Italians do not fear politically. Before the war Germany was a big factor in Italy's commercial life. The Italians say it never will be so again. Italy now really is a commercial orphan, inasmuch as many Italians fail to see any advantage in further indebtedness to the British.

Special Law in Argentina.
Buenos Aires, Sept. 14.—Representative Avellaneda is waging a vigorous fight in the Argentine congress for passage of a bill introduced by himself, prohibiting in this country all commercial practices of the nature involved in the British blacklists of enemy firms in business in foreign countries.

For violations of the proposed prohibition, the bill provides a maximum fine of $100,000, imprisonment of up to six months and cancellation of the offending firm's charter to transact business in the country. Avellaneda is ex-speaker of the Argentine house of Representatives and one of the most influential of its members. His bill is considered to stand an excellent chance of adoption.

HUGE SUMS SPENT BY LAST CONGRESS

Senator Warren Compiles Figures
Showing That Democrats Spent
Almost a Thousand Million Dollars.

New York, Sept. 14.—Nearly one thousand million dollars has been the cost to the people of the United States of their experiment in entrusting the affairs of the nation to the hands of a single party. The figures have been compiled and presented to the United States senate by Senator Warren, who was chairman of the appropriations committee during the last democratic administration. Mr. Warren gave the total appropriations for the four years of the Taft administration, and the total for the four years of the democratic administration, insofar as a total had been reached. His figures show just what the democrats had appropriated on September 7, 1916, and the total for the four years of democratic administration, including the $25,000,000 which, under the treaty ratified in the closing hours of the session, the United States will pay for the Danish West Indies. The figures are as follows:

1910	$994,848,750.94
1911	$23,837,924.46
1912	$20,822,852.43
1913	$45,536,498.98
Total	$1,085,045,926.81

These expenditures do not, in either instance, include expenditures for the Panama Canal. The figures for the years for which the democrats have made appropriations are as follows:

1914	$1,032,407,388.41
1915	$1,094,272,613.55
1916	$1,095,367,968.72
1917 (incomplete)	$1,824,543,287.93
Total	$4,046,588,258.61

Deducting from these figures of the republicans from those of the democrats, the remainder reaches the enormous total of $1,046,568,866.62. It will be contended, of course, that the increased cost of preparedness should be deducted. While additional appropriations will go far to counterbalance that item, which amounts at most to $400,000,000, even if that is deducted, there still remains an increase by the democrats of $746,000,000 for the four years entrusted to their charge. When these figures are read in the light of the democratic extravagance, etc., they afford a striking example of how far the democrats have failed to square their performances with its promises.

PARTY PLATFORMS DRAFTED TUESDAY

Both Democrats and Republicans
Meet Next Week to Consider
State Issues for November.
Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—Political attention in Wisconsin has turned to the platform convention of both parties which will be held in this city next Tuesday, as provided by law.

The main business of the meetings will be to draw up a platform upon which the pre-election campaign will be made, elect a state central committee consisting of two members from each congressional district and to select one elector from each congressional district for president and vice president and two such electors at large.

Those who may participate in the conventions are all successful candidates for state offices at the primary election on Sept. 5, members of both houses of the legislature and holdover members of the state senate.

That there will be some warm fights in the convention is predicted. The republican convention will be made up of supporters of Gov. E. L. Phillips, Senator R. M. La Follette and former Governor Francis E. McGovern, so that widely varied ideas will be included in the platform.

The progressives are considering presenting a plank to the convention which would advocate a minimum wage for women and another adding occupational diseases to the disabilities coming under the compensation law. The suffrage cause bill will also be included in a plank to be presented by the progressives.

If the conservatives present a plank recommending the repeal of the primary election law, as now seems probable, it will start a big battle. The democrats will aim to adopt a platform which will be in accordance with the progressive views of Burr Williams, candidate for governor and still not so progressive as to give the offense to the wing of the party headed by Judge John C. Karel.

Williams' adherents will undoubtedly sit in the driver's seat and control the meeting.

INCOMES TO GOVERN GERMAN FOOD PRICES

Graduate Scale of Prices for Stuffs to be Prevalent Under New Plan This Winter.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Essen, Germany, Sept. 14.—The poorer classes must not be exposed during the coming winter to the discomforts they have suffered the past few months," said Secretary Stegerwald of Baron Batecki's Food bureau at a public meeting held here. While a number of Socialists in the audience interrupted him with loud exclamations Stegerwald outlined the new measures now being worked out for relief of poorly-paid wage-earners.

Among the proposals incorporated in the scheme is a sliding scale of food prices according to income, or as an alternative a scheme of compensation by the State in cases of certain articles of food the prices of which cannot be reduced suddenly.

Elaborate precautions are being taken to ensure a supply of potatoes, autumn fruits and vegetables at reasonable prices for the coming winter. Stegerwald also promised that the prices of meat should soon be lowered and that workers employed on hard physical labor should receive an extra allowance of meat.

The diocesan newspaper, the Kirchlicher Anzeiger, contains an order from the Archbishop of Cologne directing the Church authorities to devote forthwith all the church moneys to the new war loan and exhorting the clergy to spare no effort to induce all the faithful to contribute "since this is necessary to bring the war to a victorious conclusion for us."

Effectual Warning.
Anxious Mother—"I wish you would speak to my son about smoking, bishop. Tell him he won't go to heaven if he persists in it." The Bishop—"My dear lady, that argument is out of date. I'll warn him that he won't get on the ball team."—Judge.

RARE "DEATH GOD" IS FOUND BY EXPLORER

"God of Death" in form of a pottery water-bottle.

This treasure was brought to the United States by Captain de Booy, a young Dutch explorer who has just arrived from a four months' expedition in the West Indies.

Captain de Booy found the "Death God" in a cave where it had stood long before the days of Columbus. The natives were afraid of caves, and consequently it was never found.

"There is only one other in the world, that a female," said the explorer. "This one is a male and much larger than the other."

The jar together with a large number of other specimens brought by the captain will be placed in the American Indian Museum, New York.

MAKES RECORD AS WALKING EXPLORER

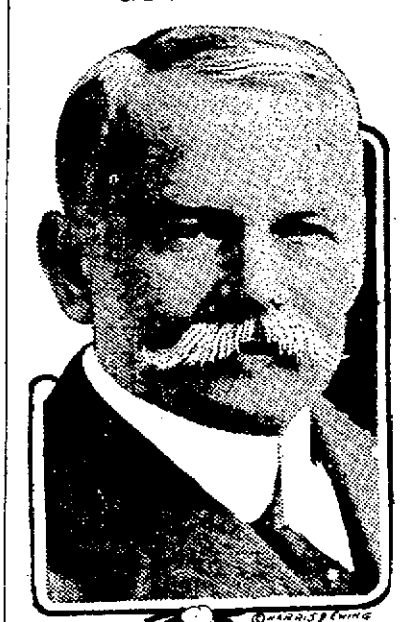

Russell Hastings Millward.

Russell Hastings Millward, well-known explorer of the tropics, has traveled 13,407 miles on foot through jungles. He is thirty-nine years old and has spent seventeen years traveling on foot through uncharted portions of Africa and South and Central America. He travels on both scientific and commercial missions.

Millward has contributed a large number of specimens to the New York Zoo and has written many articles for scientific publications. On his next trip to Brazil he plans to capture a white-lipped peccary for the New York Zoo. This animal is a species of the wild pig, the prey of the jaguar, and is very rare. There is now no specimen of this kind in the United States.

SWEET TO MAKE GOVERNOR RACE

Edwin F. Sweet.

Edwin F. Sweet, assistant secretary of commerce, has promised Michigan Democrats that he will make the run for governor on their ticket this fall. Mr. Sweet hails from Grand Rapids and before his appointment to his present post represented his district, normally Republican, in the lower house of congress for two years.

GRASP OPPORTUNITY ADVICE TO TEACHERS

Superintendent Cary Urges Rural School Teachers to Take An Active Interest in Community Affairs.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Sept. 14.—The rural school teacher is urged by State Superintendent C. P. Cary to take a deep interest in community life and not allow herself to be engulfed in "petty social ways—parties, dances and the like." The complete statement is being sent to all of the school teachers of the state.

"You will find so much to do that the world is not half long enough," says Mr. Cary in his statement to the teachers. "You will discover the world is full of lonesome people, many of them far more lonesome than you have ever been. They will want the sunshine you can spread about you. Upon the hill is a farmer's wife who longs for a bit of relief that you can give from the dull grind of daily toil. Here is a farmer who for years has toiled early and late to transform a pine forest into a farm. He is proud of his work and longs for appreciation. When you look at his fine crops, his good cattle, his house and barn, and thank him with enthusiasm you help, expanding in the name of the community and the state for the good he has done? Boys and girls who have already dropped out of school want your appreciation and your help. They may at first want to absorb you in petty social ways—parties, dances and the like. But if you have a purpose and exercise skill you will be able to absorb them in larger plans that will rouse their ambitions and train them for a larger life."

Superintendent Cary tells the teachers that if they are "weak, egotistic and selfish, you will go on crying and pitying yourself and longing to get back where you can have a good time" doing nothing, while your mother washes and irons your clothing and darts your hostile eye points out that the coming of the teacher to the community should mark an event in the lives of the children that will be remembered when their hair has grown grey.

GINGLES' JINGLES

TWO SIDES.
A blue-eyed babe, his father's pet, his mother's pride and joy, a curly headed youngster, a sweet-dispositioned boy, with not a care and not a fault, the sunshine of the home, is called to join the choir above, no more on earth shall roam. No more his baby voice shall cheer a sad and lonely pair, no more shall mother comb and curl her baby's golden hair; nor daddy bring him playthings—he'll not need them any more, for he has passed from earthly cares to that far distant shore, has passed all pure and perfect, and will never know a wrong, has left this world for one of peace, for God's sweet land of song. 'Tis sad we know to say goodbye, the sacrifice is great, our sorrow seems so hard to bear, how we bemoan our fate, but should we not consider that perhaps 'tis for the best, that he should be in angels' care, and by the angels blest, that anguish, hardship, sorrow, grief, anxiety and woe, that's made this life so hard to face—our babe shall never know. *Edith A.
